Teri's Story

Teri is a worship leader, podcaster, life coach, author, speaker, teacher, wife, mom & Oma. She has served in ministry and music since a child, where her dad used to stand her up on a chair just so she could see over the pulpit and her voice would reach the microphone. From a very young age, Teri believed her passion for music and the ministry would be her life calling. And turns out, it is - She just didn't have any idea the twist, turns and detours God would take her on, to get her there.

There was a time in her life where those confusing turns threatened to silence her voice and caused her to doubt her calling and influence. During her years of ministry & teaching, overwork and stress began to show its' ugly hand in her life. Then, anxiety & overwhelm got an even tighter grip. Eventually burnout dealt the final blow. She felt broken physically, emotionally and even spiritually.

For years she grappled with the loss of what she had believed was God's purpose and calling on her life. She grieved the loss of a platform from where she had expressed her passions and love for Jesus and used both music and ministry to express that so beautifully to others.

But as I'm sure you have figured out by now, that's not the end of her story. God always knows where he's taking you, he just doesn't always take you there the way you think.

And such was the case with Teri. He had plans for her voice to be heard again, only this time on just a little different platform as an author, speaker, podcaster, and life coach to other's who might be experiencing times of confusion, doubt and chaos in their own life. He has once again empowered her voice so she can go out and empower the voice of others.
